

College Statement of Purpose

From a very young age, I have been interested in the way that the world's economics functions. Asking myself why does economics tensely affecting the society? Why does the study "Economics" exists and why do business experts keep on tackling this thing? Why do this bunch of experts invent something like inflation rate and GDP? Why do banks use LIBOR rate as their reference even if the real boss these days is the States? And why do the bosses of the Wall Street have such intense power? My enthusiasm for Economics grew from my very young age to that thing happened- the 2008 world economic crisis. During that time, I still can't understand why does it affect the whole business environment, isn't it the cause of it was just because of the bankruptcy of one bank? I was intrigued by this kind of stuffs, wondering why does the fall of "this thing" can cause varieties fear and panic.

During my early high school periods, I have seen and watched several kinds of reports and shows that keep telling me the importance of economics to the world. For me to know better, I have joined several business competitions in the Philippines held by the Philippine University and attended multiple business orations held by those Philippine business tycoons. I regularly update myself with economic developments through WSJ, and use my mathematical and analytical skills to apply those economic theories and formulas in a real life economic situation.

This year, our professor let us made several business projects and proposals in which we started to think of bizarre business strategies in order to catch one's eye. I enjoyed the chance to put some of the things that I learned from WSJ and MBA.com into practice, and result was good. And because of that try, graduating with an economics related career becomes my goal for now.

In my spare time, I enjoy spending time with other scouts and doing other scouting activities. Scouting means a lot to me, because it is the one that shows me the outside world and gives me the connection with other foreign scouts. Now, my country gives me the honor to become of the Eagle Scouts, in return, my will do my best to foster other fellow scouts before me leaving the Philippines.

I was also of the chess players of our schools, playing chess and Sudoku also fulfills my spare time and practice my logical reasoning at the same time. I see chess as a practice for the mind; like real life, winners must always think ahead of others for him or her to achieve his or her goals. This year, we won 2nd place in the local chess competitions, and was competent enough to receive a recognition medal from our school and stayed in the 1st team.

Also, studying Chinese language, Mandarin, is also one of my passions. For me, although the language English is the most commonly used language right now, but perhaps after 20 or 30 years, Mandarin will take its place, I was one of the regular picked students whenever there is a Chinese related contest except for calligraphies, and I had also attained the HSK lvl6 last two years ago.
